CHAPT. ONE
"LAND OF FROZEN LIFE."

Written and Illustrated by ADRIAN DINGLE

THE BEAUTIFUL UNDULATING PATTERN OF THE NORTHERN LIGHTS SHIMMER OVER THE ICE-FIELDS... IF YOU WERE TO WATCH CLOSELY, ON THIS OCCASION, YOU MIGHT HAVE SEEN THE FIGURE OF A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN IN CONVERSATION WITH A VAGUE, ETHERIAL FORM...

NELVANA, AND HER FATHER, KOLIAK, MIGHTY KING OF THE NORTHERN LIGHTS, ARE TALKING.

DAUGHTER, THE PEOPLES OF THE WORLD ARE WAR-WEARY AND REACHING OUT FOR THE SECRET OF UNDYING LIFE, WHICH HAS BEEN BURIED BENEATH THE ARCTIC SNOWS FOR FIVE MILLION YEARS...

THEY DO NOT REALIZE THAT THERE EXISTS A LIVING UNIVERSE OF "GLACIA"!... WAITING FOR THE HEAT FROM THE SPILLED BLOOD OF MILLIONS TO SLOWLY MELT THE ICY SEAL AND REVEAL THE SECRET OF UNDYING LIFE.

BUT, MIGHTY FATHER, WHY HAVE YOU NOT TOLD ME OF THIS SECRET THAT LIES BENEATH THE ARCTIC ICE?

BECAUSE, CHILD, THE WORLD WAS NOT READY TO RECEIVE IT, BUT NOW A VAST CREVASSE IS FORMING FOR THE FIRST TIME IN FIVE MILLION YEARS, DIRECTLY BENEATH THE LIFE-GIVING POLE-STAR.

THE GLACIANS HAVE NEVER HEARD OF THE OUTSIDE WORLD, BUT YOU HAVE YOUR FATHER'S AGE-OLD PROTECTION! GO!

NELVANA TURNS AND WAVES ONE LAST FAREWELL TO HER FATHER, THEN DISAPPEARS TOWARD THE NORTH.

I GO, TO BRING PEACE TO THE WORLD.

ON HER NORTHWARD JOURNEY, NELVANA ENCOUNTERS A RAGING BLIZZARD WHICH WARNS HER THAT SHE IS APPROACHING THE POLAR REGION.

AH... AHEAD I SEE THE GIANT CREVASSE, NOW MY ADVENTURE BEGINS!

NELVANA ALIGHTS ON THE EDGE OF THE GIANT CHASM.

HUNDREDS OF MILES BELOW LIES MY DESTINATION... I'M... I...

BEFORE SHE HAS A CHANCE TO COMPLETE HER THOUGHTS, THE BITING GALE SWEEPS NELVANA INTO THE CREVASSE

I'M FALLING... DOWN... DOWN... DOWN...

WITH A TREMENDOUS ROAR,
THE CLIFFS OF ICE SHAKE AND CRUMBLE!

THE SILENCE IS DEAFENING, I WONDER HOW FAR I'VE FALLEN?

W-WHY, THERE'S NOTHING BUT A CEILING OF ICE!
I'M TRAPPED!

FAR BELOW,
NELVANA'S CLUTCHING FINGERS
FIND A LEDGE OF ICE.

NELVANA COULD DESCEND TO THE ADVENTURES BELOW, BUT TO RETURN BY THE WAY SHE HAD COME, WAS IMPOSS--IBLE!

KOLIAK'S LIGHT RAY REMAINED TO PROTECT HER, AND THE WARMTH
OF IT WAS MELTING THE ICE
AROUND HER FEET, WHICH BEGAN
SLOWLY TO HEAVE,... AND A SOUND OF BREATHING.. BECAME..LOUDER..

THE ICE HAS GONE AND I--
I'M STANDING ON L-LIVING FLESH!

SOME GREAT MONSTER OF PAST IS COMING--
TO LIFE... OH-H

THE LONGER I REMAIN,
THE MORE ALIVE THIS HORROR WILL BECOME!

I MUST GO ON--
..CAN'T STAY HERE..
NOW IF ONLY HE DOESN'T SEE ME, I'LL--

KOLIAK'S RAY SEEMED TO HAVE AN AWAKENING EFFECT ON THIS MONSTER, PETRIFIED AND PRESERVED SINCE THE ICE AGE.

...JUMP!

MILES AND MILES DOWN,
NELVANA COULD SEE HIDEOUS SHAPES THROUGH THE ICE.

WHAT GHASTLY NIGHTMARE OF THE ICE AGE MIGHT THESE BE? ... I SEE LIGHT AHEAD!

A GROTESQUE
GATEWAY!.. THAT'S WHERE THE LIGHT COMES FROM!

AFTER PASSING THROUGH THE IMMENSE DOOR, NELVANA GASPS IN WONDERMENT!

A PHOSPHORESCENT GLOW
BATHED THE SURROUNDINGS IN PRISMATIC LIGHTS OF RAINBOW COLOURS!

SHE FINDS HERSELF STAND-ING IN A GIGANTIC COURT-YARD IN THE SHAPE OF A PERFECT CIRCLE . . . AND THE ICE MELTS AROUND HER.

THIS MUST BE A VAST AMPHI-THEATRE, BUILT
PERHAPS, FOR SOME FORM OF GLACIAN
SPORT!

THE SILENCE IS BROKEN
BY A DEAFENING ROAR, MILES ABOVE THE COURT-YARD.

THE TERRIFIC VIBRATION
CREATES A CONCUSSION WHICH FLINGS NELVANA VIOLENTLY TO THE FLOOR.

IT'S GETTING DARK... BUT WHERE DID
THE LIGHT COME FROM?

I MUST GET DOWN INTO THE CITY BELOW!...
IS THAT A DOORWAY
I SEE?

OUTSIDE THE DOOR, THE DAUGHTER OF THE NORTHERN LIGHTS LOOKS BACK AT THE AMAZING ARCHITECTURE.

ANOTHER GROTESQUE HEAD... RATHER RESEMBLES AN ANCIENT DEATH MASK!

BUT WHY SHOULD THERE BE SUCH A THING AS A
DEATH MASK IN THE LAND OF UNDYING LIFE?

HOW STILL AND QUIET LIES
THE CITY BEFORE ME!

LITTLE DOES NELVANA KNOW.
THAT AT THIS VERY MOMENT, LIFE IS RETURNING TO THE WORLD OF SILENCE.

I WONDER WHY THE ENORMOUS BUILDINGS ARE ALL ROOFED IN THE SAME MYSTERIOUS MANNER?

I WONDER WHAT THE GLACIANS THEMSELVES LOOK LIKE?

AS MELVANA STEPS BACK TO INCREASE HER VIEW OF THE CITY'S SPLENDOR, SHE BUMPS INTO SOMETHING . . .

OOF-- A STATUE!
IN THE MIDDLE OF THE STREET!
... QUEER!

IT IS INDEED A MOST REALISTIC WORK OF ART!

BUT, THROUGH THE GREAT GLASS DOME, THE POLE STAR GLEAMS WITH THE MAGNIFIED STRENGTH OF A HUGE SUN.

THE ICE IS MELTING---
IT'S NOT A STATUE, IT'S HUMAN FLESH!

CLOUDS OF STEAM ENSHROUD
THE FIGURE, AND FOR A FEW MOMENTS, IT IS RENDERED
INVISIBLE... THEN....

IT'S BREATHING!
IT'S ALIVE!

THE FIGURE GASPS FOR BREATH, AND SUPPORTS ITSELF AGAINST THE WALL.

I'M COMING,
FATHER, I'M COMING!

WHO ARE YOU?

I'M NELVANA OF THE NORTH-ERN LIGHTS --- FROM THE WORLD ABOVE.

YOUR WORDS OF DRIVEL MEAN NOTHING TO THIS ONE!
BUT YOU ARE INDEED A STRANGER!... WHERE IS MY FATHER... MUST FIND---

AS THOUGH HE HAD BUT ONE
THOUGHT IN MIND, THE STRANGER
GLIDES AWAY AT INCREDIBLE
SPEED, ON A SMALL, MOVING PLAT-FORM.

TARGA IS COMING, FATHER, I'LL SAVE YOU!

NELVANA FOLLOWS HER NEW DISCOVERY, UNTIL THEY ARE CONFRONTED BY AN APPALLING SIGHT.

HOW HORRIBLE!

THERE, BEFORE THEM, STANDS A COLOSSAL, HAIRY MONSTER, CLUTCHING A HUMAN FIGURE IN ITS UGLY, FROZEN CLAW.

DON'T SHOOT, FOOL... WOULD IT NOT BE BEST TO RESCUE YOUR FATHER, WHILE THE BRUTE IS STILL FROZEN?

TARGA LEVELS A STRANGE WEAPON AT THE BEAST, BUT HEEDS NELVANA'S WARNING!

JUST AS TARGA REACHES THE BODY OF HIS FATHER, THE PETRIFIED JAWS OF THE MONSTER BEGIN SLOWLY, TO OPEN... WIDER AND WIDER!

LIFE IS RETURNING TO THE FROZEN WORLD OF GLACIA!

NELVANA'S WORDS TRANSFORM TARGA INTO A FIGURE OF AMAZING ACTION AS HE STARTS TO CLIMB THE BEAST'S GIGANTIC, HAIRY LEG.

★ WHAT TERRIBLE NIGHTMARE IS BEING BROUGHT TO LIFE? MILES BELOW THE ARCTIC ICE?

FIVE MILLION YEARS HAS MEANT NO MORE THAN THE TWINKLING OF AN EYE TO THIS MYSTERIOUS LAND OF FROZEN LIFE!

WHO IS TARGA? HAS HE, TOO, BEEN IN A STATE OF FROZEN SLEEP, WHILE THE WORLD, AS WE KNOW IT, WAS BEING FORMED?

DON'T MISS NEXT MONTH'S GRIPPING DRAMA, WHEN WE SHALL SEE NELVANA AND TARGA IN A BATTLE WITH

"THE DREADED MAMMOTH MEN!"

MISS SMITH, ALL YOU HAVE TO SAY IS, "WESTERN TELEPHONE EXCHANGE", YOU DON'T HAVE TO YELL YIPEEE!"

TA STEE

"SPEED" SAVAGE, A NAME THAT IS KNOWN ALL OVER NORTH AMERICA, AND YET ONLY A FEW TRUSTED FRIENDS KNOW THE SECRET OF THIS FAMOUS ATHLETE. FOR "SPEED" IS IN REALITY, THE DREADED "WHITE MASK," SILENT AVENGER OF THE UNDERWORLD.

FEARED AND HATED BY CRIMINALS AND BLAMED AND HUNTED FOR MANY CRIMES BY THE LAW, "SPEED" HAS GAINED A REPUTATION AS AN ACE CRIMINOLOGIST AND PRIVATE DETECTIVE AND IT IS ONLY WHEN RED TAPE MUST BE CUT AND THE CRIMINAL FOUGHT IN HIS OWN WAY, THAT "SPEED" ASSUMES THE ROLE OF THE WHITE MASK...

THIS MONTH'S STORY
"SPEED AND HIS LOVELY ASSISTANT
MISS VERONICA LONE TAKE A WELL DESERVED HOLIDAY AT PINE LAKE, ONLY TO FIND
THEY HAVE TAKEN A

VACATION WITH DEATH

SPEED CLIMBS AGAIN TO THE TOP PLATFORM... AND EXAMINES THE EDGE WHERE ROY THOMS SLIPPED. HE FINDS A THIN COATING OF GREASE SPREAD OVER THE COCO MATTING.

SO! ANOTHER ACCIDENT. THIS TIME IT'S...

THAT 'ACCIDENT' OF ROY'S WAS A DELIBERATE MURDER. WHO EVER SPREAD THAT GREASE ON THE TOWER MADE A FATAL ERROR!

HOW DO MEAN?

WELL, THE MURDERER, USED A PAIR OF GLOVES TO APPLY THE GREASE..EVIDENTLY HE WAS DISTURBED IN THE ACT, AND PULLED THE GLOVES OFF IN A HURRY, I FOUND THEM IN A CORNER OF THE PLATFORM. THE MURDERER WASN'T WORRIED ABOUT LEAVING A PAIR OF COMMON GLOVES, FOR

THEY COULDN'T BE TRACED. BUT IN PULLING THEM OFF, HIS RING-CAUGHT IN THE INSIDE OF THE GLOVE....

'SPEED' MEETS GLORIA MASON IN HER OFFICE LATER THAT EVENING. SHE SUSPECTS THAT ROY'S DEATH WAS NOT ACCIDENTAL AND SPEED TELLS HER ABOUT THE GREASE, AND, THEN, CAUTIONS, HER TO SAY, NOTHING ABOUT IT, FOR SPEED HAS

FOUND A CLUE THE MURDERER HAS LEFT HIS RING ON THE INSIDE OF HIS GLOVE. SPEED CHECKS THROUGH THE GUEST BOOK AND FINDS THE ONLY SET OF "W.B." INITIALS BELONGING TO WILLIAM BREZLT. GLORIA TELLS SPEED THAT HE HAS OCCUPIED CABIN 10 SINCE THE OPENING OF THE LODGE

DRUMS OF THE LEOPARD MEN

DRUMS OF THE LEOPARD MEN

By Edmond Good

A white man's nightmare of a horror that dwelled in Africa's mysterious jungles

A monotonous rhythm rising from the paddles of my canoe-men was broken by the shrieking of a leopard, somewhere in the black depths of rank jungle growth that lined the river's edge and almost touched overhead. Dense foliage screened the murky fever-infested waters from a searing African sun. The big cat had been following us now for some time. From cramped quarters in the lead dug-out I watched rippling muscles of my sweating blacks as they fearfully quickened their paddle strokes. Behind, my canoe of provisions paced on within a few yards. "Bwana! village eow!" Ntuko, my headman, was pointing excitedly up stream. It was almost hidden, but though I couldn't see the usual grass huts I knew they must be there, several dugouts pulled up on the greasy mud bank announced the place as a settlement. The place, according to Ntuko was the object of my search, a gruelling search. It was here I had heard of a "white man" and, according to my calculations, it could be Owen—I wondered if I would ever see him again.

He had dropped from sight two years ago. Cliff Owen had been my room-mate at college, we both wound up working on the same job. Cliff got me the position after he landed with the National Museum. The two of us chased all over together, Huxley our staff boss, teamed us on expeditions because we showed that we could work together. I remember the last one, Cliff was sore about it, I had to finish a job and couldn't join him. He raved and finally went alone when they wouldn't release me. It was a perfect job, research in the African interior. Owen said good-bye and then he was gone. I heard from him at intervals, and then it happened. You probably have forgotten when the news broke... "WELL KNOWN GEOLOGIST MISSING." Then later... "CLIFTON OWEN BELIEVED DEAD" ... he had vanished. The jungle literally swallowed him. A year passed, finally the whole thing wasn't news any more. Then the Museum sent me, at my request, to see what I could do. That was months ago,—I arrived on the coast, and outfitted an expedition. The trek into the African interior was a nightmare, I was lost myself more than once, chasing elusive signs and whispered rumours of "white man" on Cliff's faded and mysterious trail. Ntuko helped me deeper and deeper into the jungle and I followed because I felt that somehow somewhere my friend still lived.

A stray word from a remote wild and sometimes dangerous tribe was all I needed to send me hopefully on. I knew it was up the right track, when one day, I discovered a black in one of the villages wearing a belt, I recognized it because it was one I had given Cliff on his birthday, his initials were engraved on the buckle. The black admitted getting it as a present from a "white Bwana" for some favour. That was as I could get out of the fellow, but it was proof, something real to tell me he was near.

Later, weeks later, I learned that a white stranger was believed to be living in a village further in. It was forbidden territory and my blacks had to be cautioned, almost at gunpoint, to take me in that direction. They rolled their eyes and muttered frightened words about "catmen"—the dreaded Leopard men whose human sacrifices were sometimes torn to bits with claws worn on the hands of the savage blood-crazed devotees of the cult who worshipped the jungle beast and dressed in its spotted hide. They worked themselves into a frenzy which made them believe they could transform themselves into the sinister leopard, to practice horrible mutilation on their crazed enemies. The tribe was feared and shunned by the other blacks and horrible tales made their district taboo.

Nitko, relying on the magic of my gun, kept the wild-eyed natives together as we pulled up to see the huts of the Leopard men through a thick leafy veil of jungle. My terrified cameramen flung themselves face downward to the mud of the river bank, and mumbling voodoo protection spells, would not stir. "Come Nitko, let them stay there, you come with me," I announced, and we started towards the circle of low huts.

"No more," my headman pointed apprehensively, there was not a soul in sight as we stepped into the clearing. I knew eyes would be peering at me from every dark opening in the huts, but I continued my advance. Years amongst civilized natives of different countries had taught me one thing, never show fear, even if you're scared out of your boots. It gives a fellow the upper hand—more or less. I was pondering on the effect of my entrance into the village when suddenly it happened . . . They came from everywhere it seemed, I couldn't count them, they came in a rush, it was all over in a matter of seconds. I was hurled flat on my back, and with gleaming spears upraised, they stood menacingly over me . . . and it was only me. Nitko had done a disappearing act. I didn't see him get away in the wild scramble, he had gone, deserted me.

Blacks were pouring into the nearby jungle hot on his trail. I didn't blame him, I wished him luck, hoping he could elude his pursuers. God knows I didn't want anyone to share a fate that looked like mine, at the hands of these fiends. Above me I could see the ebony figures of my captives. These were the hated Leopard Men. Every warrior afforded a spotted cloak of the jungle cat fur, and their evil eyes were beyond description. I stared at what appeared to be their medicine man or witch doctor. He was older than any living man I had ever seen. Bloodshot beady eyes regarded my prostrate form with a strange malevolent glare, his gums revealed in a toothless sneer. Hung about the creature were the trappings of his nefarious trade, devil magic, voodoo or what you choose to call it, nevertheless these medicine men held a potent power over the natives in almost every tribe. This one, as he finally finished his inspection, snapped some unintelligible command, and I felt it in the force of several sharp spear points prodding my tortured flesh. I understood the action if not the dialect. "Hold it pappy, I'm getting up" I managed (a grin as I was unceremoniously pushed up and forward.

Jabbering excitedly, the warriors sent me painfully along while I tried to evade the hissing menace of their weapons, leading me staggering towards the doorway of the largest hut. I was again knocked to the unshaken earth. When I lifted my eyes, I saw framed in the doorway a white man . . . it was Cliff! "You Cliff!" . . . You? Where?" . . . That was all I gasped in my amazement as my old friend and college chum began to raise his arms in a signal that commanded the rapt attention of my captors, who dropped instantly to their knees, touching sweat-lined foreheads to the ground. "Something's screwy here, or am I?" I thought puzzled. In a language I knew to be that of the tribe, Cliff Owen, Geologist, my buddy, the man I had spent fruitless months combing these fever-ridden jungles in a mad hope of finding, was conversing with this feared gathering of Africa's most ruthless celt . . . the brotherhood of the Leopard. It was uncanny, a chill of ice coursed my spine as I heard and witnessed the unbelievable spectacle.

Was it possible he had set himself up here in this forsaken village of savages as their leader, but how? . . . They had captured me, another white man, what was the answer? Anyway I had found him, but . . . "He doesn't recognize me, something's wrong, all wrong," I thought, and aloud I ventured as he finished his piece . . . "Cliff, it's me . . . Rogers . . . what's happened to you? Call off your bull-dogs, man" . . . That was as far as I got . . . A command from Cliff brought the flat of a spear towards my head, it wished dangerously close. I ducked and started unbelievably at my one-time colleague.

At another word from him I was caught up bodily and carried by the blacks towards the centre of the compound. Here they lashed me to a post with leather thongs, until I almost shouted aloud with the cutting pain. Without another word they left me, leaving a giant negro standing guard nearby. Cliff had disappeared with the witch doctor and, I knew, that a council was being held to decide my fate.

Night was not far off . . . I was glad for the sun's weaker rays. A day in the full merciless sun, hatless and bound as I was, would drive a man "beat crazy." I tried to figure what would happen as I awaited my fate and the warriors' return. The night would bring them prowling like their namesakes, the jungle rats. The death was so horrible . . . clawed to death, there couldn't be anything worse . . . Sweating at the pictures flashing through my mind, I tried to calm my jittery nerves. "It can't be . . . Cliff won't do that, he's a white man, not a blood-thirsty savage, he knows me,—that's it!" Suddenly the whole thing became clear. "he recognized me and wouldn't give it away, the witch doctor would have noticed, he's playing for time" . . . I felt decidedly relieved now, and wondered how we would escape these madmen when the time came, and what Cliff was cooking up to get us safely away from the cursed place . . . I wondered too if poor Njuka had managed to give them the slip, there was no doubt that my canoe-men had made themselves scarce at the first rush, probably before, they would be miles down the river by now, paddling like demons possessed.

A great bulbous African moon rose suddenly above the trees and spread its unearthly radiance over the village huts and clearing. I heard voices, growing closer, then I saw the pack of devils! . . . In the weird moonlight, clothed from head to foot in spotted leopard skins, they looked all too much like the real thing. At the head of the approaching horde, Cliff, his white skin, even though bronzed by years spent in the sun, stood out in sharp contrast as he led them towards the spot where I waited tense and anxious. In his shadow, trotting like a playful cat, the witch doctor uttered fearful words of magic and gyrated gleefully in lustful anticipation. Nearer, I saw that each black wore long claws of the jungle cats, these to rake and maul the victim . . . and I was it!

Cliff's eyes would not meet mine for an instant of recognition, but seemed to stare blankly ahead. I spoke to him . . . time was precious now—"Cliff, what will we do, these lunatics won't wait, what are our chances of getting out?" But he didn't hear me, or pretended he didn't. Looking almost like one of them, he was within a few feet of me. I noticed his eyes, they burned with same fanatical evil light that filled those encircling devotees of death. I yelled then, "Cliff, it's me, don't you know you're old friend Rogers?"

He closed in, I thought for one instant he was going to whisper to me . . . to say my name, but my bonds, make a break for it. Behind him, the crowd surged closer. He stood poised, and to my utter horror he raised his muscular arms, revealing razor sharp claws, attached to his fingers, and with an expression of malevolent hatred, cried triumphantly as he raked my shirt off in one awful motion. Horrified, I was cruelly and securely held by the bonds. "Your mad, man, insane!" I shrieked in his leering face. "Get it over with, for God's sake and stop playing cat and mouse." I straightened to take it. In that instant I knew the awful truth, he was mad . . . Clifford Owen, once brilliant geologist, my real friend and partner . . . His arms were raised again, this time the searing claws would find my bare chest, and to the mob behind this would be the signal to rush in and finish the job.

I waited, an eternity it seemed. Cliff, or the thing before me that was not a man, paused to gather force. I could feel death coming . . . Like a thunderbolt tearing the air, a deafening shot rang above the clamour. Someone screamed. It was the mummy-faced witch doctor behind Owen. Clutching madly at his stomach, he spun around, blood gushed from a hollet wound in his abdomen as he fell forward on his face . . . dead!

Silence hung over the startled tribe. I didn't know who had sent the shot, but in another instant my startled gaze was pulled back to Oweto. He was awaying strangely, wild-eyed, gasping for breath and then with a moan he fell limply at my feet.

The next few minutes were breathless ones. I thought Cliff Owen had also stopped a bullet from the mysterious gun. The Leopard men dropped fearfully to their haens peering into the shadows. From the jungle a figure strode bravely into the moonlight. "Ntuko! YOU!" In his big hand he carried my automatic, quickly he stepped to my side and severed the thongs, freeing me. "They 'fraid big magic," he whispered. "You shot the witch doctor?" I laughed unbelievably. "They 'fraid Bwana's fire stick." Behind us, a groan escaped Owen and I bent anxiously down to find him breathing, his eyes opened and the fallen man looked full at me. "Rogers, what . . . what's happened . . . where am I . . . how?" He gasped clutching my arm. "How did you find me?" . . .

. . . Ahead the sluggish river twisted towards civilization, we had been travelling non-stop for two days in the stolen canoe. "It won't be long now Rog." Cliff panted happily, as he eased up on his paddle. "Sure will be glad to see white faces and civilization again," he grinned. The village and terror of the Leopard cult lay far behind us now, we were pretty sure they would not follow. They didn't attempt to stop us as I carried Owen in the river and pushed off with Ntuko's help in one of their canoes. On the way, I got the story pieced together as we fled the nightmare of that unforgettable night.

. . . Travelling into the interior, when first he arrived, Cliff had been deserted on the border of the district that was showed as the haunt of the dreaded Leopard cult. Stubbornly, without his canoe men, Cliff pushed on. The catmen had found him a fever-ridden wreck, wandering aimlessly. He remembered their demons, throbbing into his doll senses and the mummy-like witch doctor who nursed him back to life. Then he seemed to lose time itself. "The beggar had me hypnotized or something, I know it now," Cliff swore. Then there were times, he said, when he did remember who he was and tried to escape, but always there came the sleep of forgetfulness when the evil witch doctor appeared. "You were perhaps the first 'white' they had ever seen, and that old fox used you to work up his power over the tribe, made you King and then used you for a stooge . . . a tool in his hands, by some strange hypnotic force." I was glad to see Cliff his old self again, for I remembered the night when he might have taken my life, unknowingly.

Ntuko, that big good-natured black, we both owed him our lives, not taking us nearer to freedom. His escape, and faith in my "fire stick" had done it. I recalled, "When Ntuko picked off the old devil, he broke the hold he had on you Cliff, it was then that you recognized who I was," Cliff Owen shuddered visibly and said: "Another minute and it would have been too late. That black of yours hit the bull's eye, when he plugged the witch doctor . . . Hey, let's quit this talk Rogers, I can still hear those cursed drums, let's get out of this place, or I'll be seeing SPOTS before my eyes!"

OPTICAL ILLUSIONS

FIG. 1. ONE OF THE DOTS IS PLACED IN THE CENTRE OF THE CIRCLE, THE QUESTION IS WHICH ONE. THE LOWEST ONE IS OBVIOUSLY SOME LITTLE WAY BELOW CENTRE. YOU CAN SEE THAT AT A GLANCE. NEVERTHELESS, IT IS THE CENTRE ONE.

FIG. 2. IS A RECTANGLE SMOTHERED WITH RADIAL LINES. CLOSE TO THE CENTRE ARE TWO VERTICAL LINES WHICH BULGE IN THE MIDDLE. BUT THE FACT IS THEY DON'T. THEY ARE EQUIDISTANT FROM TOP TO BOTTOM.

FIG. 3. IS A SORT OF CIRCLE WHICH AT FIRST GLANCE SEEMS TO BE BROKEN AT A NUMBER OF POINTS. CLOSER EXAMINATION SHOWS THAT THIS IS AN OPTICAL DELUSION AND THAT IT IS UNBROKEN AND OF UNIFORM THICKNESS THROUGHOUT BUT AFTER HAVING A GOOD LOOK AT IT, DECIDE THE ONE DRAWN IS FLATTENED HERE & THERE, BUT IS IT? CHECK WITH A COMPASS AND YOU WILL SEE IT IS A PERFECT CIRCLE. THE FATTENING DOESN'T EXIST.

FIG. 4. IS AN ARCH, IN WHICH ONE SIDE SEEMS TO HAVE SLIPPED DOWN. IF YOU WERE TO TAKE AWAY THE VERTICAL BAND YOU WOULD SEE THAT THE RIGHT SIDE COULD BE CONTINUED TO THE LEFT. THE ARCH WOULD THEN BE PERFECT.
